HUMAN RIGHTS | VOICES

TEASER I - 09 | 2020

*All human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights.
They are endowed with reason and conscience and should act towards one another in a spirit of brotherhood.*

Human Rights Charta, Article 1

COURAGE

The year 2020 will bring People, States, International Financial systems, Democracies and Human Rights to their limits.

The pandemic and its measures expose – on a small as well as large scale. And we are learning a lot in the process.

Do we have the courage to look through?

EVERYTHING IS INTERCONNECTED

We are all currently learning with insistent Radicalism that everything is interconnected. We all are breathing. That alone connects each of us with life on this planet.

We all share this world and are on the same boat. The actions and thoughts of each individual help to shape the whole in every moment. Separation of race, gender, religion is an illusion.

A simple yet comprehensive insight that can now lead us together into a consciousness of greatness and unity.

EVOLUTION

Evolution is a process of experiencing and recognition. We are on the way and have not yet reached our goal.

Those who want to believe that evolution takes place only in the material realm, that the biggest truncheon makes us master of it, or that man who has most highly developed consciousness in this vast universe, may of course do so. He is free to manifest such a world for himself and his descendants. And according to the physical law of attraction there will be a place for them too.

And there is also a place for people who experience themselves as learners and who perhaps only vaguely recognise in themselves a desire to return to the source. We would like to accompany these people for a part of the way and inspire them with our work.

The universal man

Ready?

We are just about to take the bend at 120 km/h.

Our world is in imbalance – placarded with melodious false communication. A mirror of our thoughts and actions!

We are currently experiencing an unprecedented dimension of division. The boundaries no longer defined clearly the racial and gender concepts, but are now digging deep into the last place of refuge, the families.

The facades are crumbling. Fear is rampant and drives crowds of people – succumbing to Self-Disempowerment.

Respiratory masks, social distancing, tracking and the threat of compulsory vaccinations seek to anchor deep in people's minds the belief that our salvation lies in separation alone.

Vampirism, or in other words, the belittling of others in order to elevate oneself becomes a lifestyle, propagated as a strength. Since long this trend has reached our 'social justice warriors'.

If one did not 'know' that all this is due to a virus and our security, one might think it is a globally coordinated lesson in 'Divide and Rule' 3.0.

We are creators and creation.

With the power within us, we strengthen the perspectives we take in every moment and thus actively shape the world in which we live.

Consciously or unconsciously.

We make many decisions every day and we alone bear the responsibility for the energies we send out.

The world as we see it before us is home-made. And demand regulates supply.

The New World Order is the Enemy of Humanity

ALL IS MIND

A multitude of perspectives are currently wrestling for our attention. For many people, the search for their own position in this confusion holds the chance to become aware of the power of their thoughts and actions – and to follow a path of conscious personal responsibility and thus self-empowerment.

Our uncertainties make us realise how important it is to develop instruments in our own being that guide us, even if we cannot see the hand in front of our eyes.

It is time to stop believing and start recognising.

Human RIGHTS

How does our democratic society as a whole and in its parts deal with diversity of opinion and human rights? It is precisely in times of crisis that the true status quo is revealed – when there is no strength left to maintain the facade.

It is becoming apparent just how fragile the awareness of our human rights and the democracies based on them is.

Within two weeks in March 2020, the most basic human rights of millions of people worldwide, regardless of age, culture, nationality or religion, were suspended or reduced to a minimum – by decree from 'above'.

Moreover, it can be observed that critical perspectives on this issue fall victim to censorship in many places and also in 'democratic systems'.

All over the world, videos are banned, journalists are arrested, and respectable doctors are discredited. In many places, voices are being raised that the current situation is being used by governments and groups to further their power interests.

Cognitive dissonance

The space for debate on what can and cannot be said is being decisively defined. The term 'conspiracy theorist' has quickly become widely used in public discourse – for anything that deviates from the fear of death with/by a virus.

Is the fear of the loss of human rights less important than the fear of a supposedly deadly virus?

And is the evaluation/devaluation of people who think differently the hallmark of a highly developed democratic consciousness that no longer needs to be guided by human rights guidelines?

This time reveals to us where we stand, as individuals and as societies, in our growth into a consciousness in which the contents of human rights are recognised and truly integrated into the thinking and actions of everyone.

We no longer need to invent human rights, they were given to humanity in 1948, following two world wars that left millions dead. But it seems that we should now prove ourselves worthy of them in order to keep them.

IT'S YOUR CHOICE

At the moment, many elementary aspects are combined in an overall situation. Power is in the air. The situation offers opportunities for both good and devastating scenarios.

At its core, it reveals a moment of true democracy in which the voice of every person in the world has a lasting significance. Many people are currently feeling this and are consciously or unconsciously facing a fork in the road and a decision:

If you want to live your life in fear, in the 'protection' of the illusion, undisturbed by personal responsibility, because in the end you only do what you are told or 'That's how the game is played' – then pause.

You will be taken care of. You will always be provided with something to be afraid of, you will always be presented with someone to hate or worship under the protection of the group, they will be ready to think for you and even to release you from the burden of your true power and the responsibility that comes with it.

And it is only out of concern that you will be given a place to remain in obedience until a world saviour arrives.

The Aligory of Complacency

Or do you choose to live your life truly, empowered, responsible for what you contribute to this world and where you stand – in every moment, in thought as well as in action, turned towards a higher principle of growth. And in clearly recognising things as they really are, however unattractive they may be.

This path needs courage. It means an honest encounter with your own fears, it means change, often uncomfortable changes, it means realising that there is still much to learn – and it leads you to your true greatness, to your true potential, to your true power – and finally to freedom.

All of us have been given the chance to prepare for this decision in our individual ways. It must now be made. And it is an offer of the moment. We have free will. Make your free decision. No one will judge you, just as you judge no one.

It is time to take responsibility for your own thoughts and actions.

UNCONDITIONAL

LOVE

The word LOVE in correlation to the being and purpose of mankind, moves more and more to the outer edge of the allowed space of debate, in the centre of which fear, anger, war, hate and death try to absorb all our attention.

To reveal that one wants to walk one's own path truly in love and peace, and to see in it the solution to the problems of our time, currently ear-splittingly earns one the title of 'conspiracy theorist' or 'esoteric lunatic'.

The striving to grasp the concept from a neutral perspective from above and in its entirety catapults us directly and with force out of the permissible space of debate and society.

People are fighting hard – but why?

Truthfulness works with truth, whose power lies in the absence of illusion. Unconditional love is demonstrably the strongest, the ultimate power – in us, on this planet and far beyond. And peace leads us into unity.

The liberation from fear, illusion and separation makes human beings a risk – but only for those whose aim is control and domination. On a small scale as well as on a large scale.

THE LESSON OF APPRECIATION

In order to empower ourselves in the power of love, to enable it to be effective in our lives and through us, we must come into contact with our true being.

We find it within ourselves. It is revealed to us through the path of sincere appreciation, towards ourselves and towards the loving power that constitutes our human existence. Only from a healthy self-respect does greatness grow into true appreciation of all that surrounds us.

And only on this can the recognition of the meaning of dignity grow. A person who is aware of his inherent dignity walks upright through life. This is an important step towards a world as we should leave it to our children.

This seems to be one of the challenges of the moment for humanity. Learning to respect and appreciate oneself and others. This also includes the honest examination of elementary values.

What does freedom in its entirety mean? What is conscience? What does personal responsibility mean? What is dignity? Where do I find myself in it?

We see a society that invokes these terms many times a day as the basis for its own trade. And we look at a world in which exactly the opposite has manifested itself. This is not only due to politics or an "elite" striving for power!

If we want to make a difference and make the world a better place, we must first and foremost commit to making ourselves a better. Each and every one of us.

We wish all of us the courage to walk our paths upright, on our own responsibility and in clear recognition.

MEAR ONE

MEAR ONE (Kalen Ockerman) has been at the forefront of LA's graffiti and mural culture for nearly three decades. He is famous for having pioneered the Melrose graffiti art movement in the late 80s and is considered by many to be LA's most prolific public muralist.

Early on in his career, MEAR gained his recognition for building the bridge between graffiti art and fine art. He was the first graffiti artist to exhibit at the infamous 01 Gallery on Melrose, as well as at 33 1/3 Gallery in Silverlake, where Banksy would later debut his first North American show.

MEAR ONE's work was part of the landmark Art in the Streets 2011 exhibit at the Los Angeles Museum of Contemporary Art. He is perhaps best known for constructing powerful narratives juxtaposing philosophy, ancient mythology and modern politics to inspire an evolved conscious. This interpretation of reality is achieved through balanced dialogue between realism and the supernatural.

MEAR ONE helps us envision the sublime spirit of our time – not by escaping reality, but by confronting it head on.
